“ Today I had a really old memory. When I was a kid jr high age, we lived in Long Beach. Uncle Art & Aunt Alda would come to visit us from WA. When we had family dinners, it was his duty to go to LA (Exposition Park) to pick up Ethel and Al. What made it funny to us, but I'm sure not for Uncle Art, was that he could drive there in about 45 minutes, but once Ethel was in the car, it took two hours to get back to Long Beach. The reason was she didn't allow anyone to drive on the freeways AND you couldn't make any left turns. There weren't that many freeways back then, anyway! Of course, going back was the same thing two hours to her house and only 45 minutes back. Couldn't help but laugh about this after all this time--no idea why it hit me today!!
