“ Lisa, I am so sorry for your loss. We also lost a baby girl at birth. Nothing I can say will ease your pain. Only time. We don't understand God's reasoning now but maybe someday we will.##imported-begin##Cathy Glaesemann##imported-end##

“ We just heard about your sweet little angel and wanted to express our condolences. It's so hard to understand why these things happen. The only thing I know is that if we have faith in our Savior and can realize that He knows the "big picture" we can feel the peace we so desperately need. Our prayers are with all of you.##imported-begin##Kent and Louise Andersen##imported-end##

“ I have no words that will take away your/our pain. We will all miss our little Kennedy very much....our hearts are all aching. He is our source of strength, we have to cling to Him to see us thru. He is our peace. He is our rock. He is the giver and taker of life-we are all in His hands. Baby Kennedy is in the arms of Jesus...We do not understand but we can know that we WILL see our children again one day when we, too, face Jesus, face to face. We CAN trust Him even though we do not understand. I love you all and pray God will give you-each of us, in the Castro/Chandler families- the strength you/we need each day as you go thru the healing process. Love you so much, mom/momma Deb###imported-begin##mom/momma Deb###imported-end##

“ Amador and family,

I just wanted to come and sign this to let you guys know that I am deeply sorry for all of our loss here, you guys with a beautiful daughter and the rest of the family with a niece, granddaughter, or cousin. It truly is a tragic time to have the life of a child taken, but it is also a blessing, in that she never left the hands of god. I am truly sorry brother and sister, but we all must go back to our creator when he calls for us. I love you guys.##imported-begin##Adam Castro and Family##imported-end##
