High school sports, fishing, hunting, and exploring the mountains were his passions. “ One April 1st, I got into class and told Bullis that I had left my algebra book up in my locker, moments before the starting class bell was about to ring. Bullis gave me permission to go upstairs and get it without being considered tardy. When I came back down, the entire class had sheets of paper out on their desks and Bullis said we were about to have a pop quiz. I pulled out a sheet of paper from my spiral notebook and sat ready at my desk. Then a few seconds later, Randi Agnew, sitting behind me, leaned ahead to me and calmly said: "April fool."
