Valente was born in Guerrero, Mexico on June 1, 1967, son of Eva Mayo and Juan Melgoza. He grew up in Michoacan, Mexico and was a veteran on the Mexican Navy. He came to the United States looking for a good future.

Valente was a hard working field worker who took pride in any job he did. His favorite occupation was working as a security guard.

Anyone who knew him would describe him as a very humble, honest and simple man. He left the most memorable impression with his amazing smile.

He loved to dance and sing and his soft spot was his family. Valente would help them anyway he could. He lives on through his daughters, Valeria, Marla and Samantha, his family and his loved ones. We will always cherish our memories of our father and friend.

“ The most craziest & silly memory I have is one my dad was sitting on couch he was telling me how he was gonna become rich with his new invention. So I tell him oh yea what is it?... He then grabs his cell phone and rubs the screen all over his cheek and says see phone cleaner it's leaves it spotless I laughed so hard listening to my dad be silly and foolish ahhhh dad I said. I never forget his one of a kind smile !!! And his no so so funny jokes and story's that made everybody laugh cuz he told them with such enthusiasm. I love you dad <3 miss you soo much ... Samantha
